On June 17, 2010, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission issued its Transmission Planning and Cost Allocation Notice of Proposed Rulemaking. The Proposed Rule follows three regional technical conferences and extensive comments filed in response to an October 2009 request for comment on transmission planning and cost allocation, and proposes significant changes in the transmission planning and cost allocation arena. Meanwhile, regional transmission organizations are considering and implementing changes in this area as well.

At this roundtable discussion, two Commission Staff members involved in preparing the Proposed Rule – comments for which are due September 29, 2010 – will explain the purpose of the Proposed Rule, and be available to answer questions about it. The event will not address any cases that are currently pending before the Commission.
