

Brian Treby

Brian D. Treby is a Florida attorney, consultant and writer focused on energy, sustainability, environmental and social justice.

Brian served as attorney-advisor to the Honorable Joel Gerber, Chief Judge, (Ret.) United States Tax Court, in Washington, D.C. before entering private practice as an associate attorney. After working in wealth management as a financial advisor and strategist at SunTrust Bank (now Truist), Brian formed Treby Law Firm, a solo practice focused on tax, general business, estate planning, real estate, wills, trusts, estates and probate administration. In 2010, Brian co-founded Centivise, LLC, to simplify tax credit qualification and automated reporting for business owners and franchisees.

Brian earned a B.S. (political science) from Florida State University, his J.D. from Walter F. George School of Law, Mercer University, and an LL.M. in taxation from Georgetown University School of Law. Following a passion and interest for renewable energy and energy storage, Brian graduated in 2020 from Vermont Law School with an LL.M. in energy law.

Brian currently serves as president-elect for the Energy Bar Association - Southern Chapter and lives in St. Petersburg, Florida with his wife, Jennie, and daughter, Anna.
