WELCOME FROM THE PRESIDENT

Open, robust and recrimination-free debate about issues that matter is the foundation of a healthy democratic system. As members of the Energy Bar Association, we are proud to provide the preeminent platform for informed discourse on energy policy and legal issues that make a profound difference in the way we live. Thanks to the hard work of EBA's Professional Education Council (PEC), EBA's Board of Directors is pleased to present a Mid-Year Energy Forum that meets our historically high standard for addressing key issues facing the energy industry. Welcome!

For as long as most of us have been in practice, change in the energy industry and in the things expected of the industry, has been its hallmark. Once again, this conference focuses on change, addressing topics ranging from the appropriate role of carbon emissions in FERC regulation, to the evolving nature of the electric utility model and on to investor expectations of an economic sector experiencing profound change. Addressing these topics and more, the PEC has put together a distinguished and diverse set of panels which promise the vigorous debate that these topics warrant.

I'd also like to put in a special plug for the Women in Energy Breakfast event on October 16, featuring our very own Delia D. Patterson, Senior Vice President, Advocacy & Communications and General Counsel, American Public Power Association (APPA) speaking to her story of involvement and success in the energy field. Go Delia!

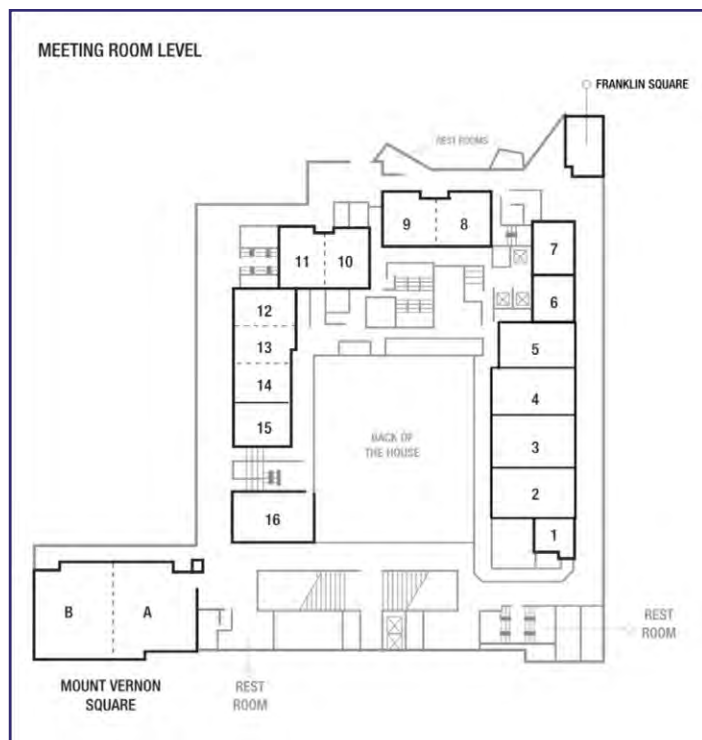

Finally, we're particularly pleased to welcome Department of Energy (DOE) General Counsel Bill Cooper as our lunch speaker on October 16, and Commissioner Richard Glick, as our dinner speaker the evening of the 16th. Bill was very gracious in welcoming EBA's overture for a closer relationship with DOE Staff, and generous to offer to share his thoughts with us. Commissioner Glick, now well-known to many of us, has agreed (no doubt contrary to good counsel) to serve as our entertaining dinner speaker. Good luck Commissioner Glick!

On behalf of the EBA Board, thanks so much for joining us for what promises to be an educational, thought-provoking and fun event!

General Session: The Role of Carbon in FERC Regulation

Grand Ballroom North/Central

Historically, FERC has not figured prominently in the debates over how to address climate change. But that has changed in recent years. As governments, industries, and non-governmental organizations look for sustainable ways to address climate change, FERC's role is often included in these debates. This panel will explore the role that FERC can and should play under NEPA, the NGA, and the FPA when it comes to greenhouse gas emissions. The discussion will consider how FERC regulates the bulk power system under the "just and reasonable" standard and its certificate process under the "public convenience and necessity" standard. The panel will explore what should FERC be doing, if anything, to comply with its Congressional mandates and central role over the nation's energy markets and infrastructure.

Concurrent Sessions

Session A: The 21st Century Utility

Grand Ballroom South

Driven by state and local policies and responding to customer and stakeholder input, the traditional utility model is under increasing pressure. Transformative technologies are available behind the meter, carbon-free or reduced resources are demanded by many customers and utilities are increasingly being asked to serve as platforms for alternative technologies and customer choice. This panel grapples with the available models, what works and doesn't, and what it all suggests for the future of the utility industry through the mid-century.

Speakers:

Caroline Choi, Senior Vice President, Corporate Affairs, Edison International and Southern California Edison

Julia Hamm, President & Chief Executive Officer, Smart Electric Power Alliance

Laura Lewis, Chief Legal Officer and General Counsel, Sacramento Municipal Utility District

Mike O'Boyle, Director of Electricity Policy, Energy Innovation

Session B: Energy infrastructure post-Hoopa

Congressional Ballroom A/B

Upsetting decades of Clean Water Act permitting practice, in the D.C. Circuit's recent Hoopa Valley Tribe v. FERC decision, the Court held that where a state and an applicant agreed to repeatedly withdraw and refile the same water quality certification request, the state waived certification. Since the issuance of the court's decision, two states have denied without prejudice pending applications for water quality certifications, with at least one explicitly citing the desire to inadvertently avoid waiving the state's right to certify. This panel will focus on the implications of Hoopa for permitting of energy infrastructure, including a discussion of recent Federal Energy Regulatory Commission decisions interpreting Hoopa and agency reactions to the Court and FERC's decisions.

This conversation will engage electric and gas utility general counsels to explore the complexities they face as legal department leaders to building diverse and inclusive legal departments and discuss how the reward in doing so can help cultivate a talented organization that is best suited to effectively serving clients. These industry leaders may also elect to discuss their expectations of law firm peers and how diverse and inclusive measures employed at those organizations help improve the legal services provided to their company clients.

General Session: Cybersecurity and Supply Chain: Who, What, Where, Huawei?

Grand Ballroom North/Central

Recognizing that entities supplying software and hardware to the electric grid may pose profound security challenges, newly-minted NERC Standard CIP-013-1 requires Responsible Entities to develop documented supply chain cyber security risk management plans. NERC's related Implementation Guidance supports third party accreditation as a recommended element of a compliance plan, and work is now being undertaken in a number of silos on some such programs. While this work is underway, responsible entities are largely left to their own devices in managing these risks. How they are doing so, and how we can effectively counsel our clients in controlling security and regulatory risk is the focus of this panel discussion.

Session A: Drafting and Negotiating a Power Purchase Agreement:

A Skills Session

Grand Ballroom South

This concurrent session will feature a three-part approach to training lawyers how to negotiate a power purchase agreement (PPA). During the first twenty minutes of the session, an experienced practitioner will layout PPA fundamentals, including a review of definitions and key PPA terms. This will include an overview of fundamental motivations behind the PPA instrument, such as the customer's ability to avoid capital commitments and the developers ability to qualify for preferred tax treatment.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 16, 2019

Second, an experienced practitioner will reveal the most current trends in PPAs by introducing and explaining the most hotly negotiated PPA terms.

The last forty minutes of the session will be reserved for a practicum involving a sample PPA and audience participation. Participants will be given a few moments to review the agreement and identify the key terms in response to a questionnaire. The panelists will answer the questions raised in the exercise through a mock negotiation of key provisions and a short question and answer session.

Congressional Ballroom A/B

Pipeline projects get built on the strength and stability of Precedent and Firm Transportation Agreements. These agreements have shifted over time as deals have evolved and FERC policies adjusted. Federal, state and local activities also have created additional risks and extended timelines for certain projects that parties often seek to mitigate contractually. What are the current best practices for these agreements? Join the instructor to explore this questions and more.

This panel will be a frank discussion about what investors want from their investments in regulated companies. What drives their decisions to deploy capital and what challenges do they see on the horizon? The discussion will address whether investors are avoiding certain sectors regulated by FERC, how Wall Street currently views regulated risks and whether there are opportunities for more productive dialogue between regulators and investors.
