

Brian Treby

Brian D. Treby is a Florida attorney, consultant, writer, and entrepreneur focusing on energy resilience and sustainability for social justice.

Brian served as attorney-advisor to the Honorable Joel Gerber, Chief Judge, (Deceased) United States Tax Court, in Washington, D.C., before entering private practice as an attorney. He later worked in wealth management at SunTrust Bank (now Truist), before forming Treby Law Firm to focus on tax, estate planning, wills, trusts and probate administration, business, and real estate transactions. Brian co-founded Centivise, LLC, a private company devoted to simplifying tax credit reporting for employers.

Brian earned a B.S. (political science) from Florida State University, a J.D. from The Walter F. George School of Law, Mercer University, an LL.M. in taxation from Georgetown University School of Law, and an LL.M in energy law from Vermont Law School.

Brian currently serves as president for the Energy Bar Association's Southern Chapter and lives in St. Petersburg, Florida with his wife, Jennie, daughter, Anna and their dog, Sally.
