

Jeremy is a technology architect with over two decades of experience working with organizations of all sizes to solve technology and cybersecurity problems. He has a knack for seeing past the noise, getting to the root issue, and solving it. Jeremy leads SkyHelm in protecting America's critical infrastructure technology and provides oversight for the technical team in their strategic and daily operations.